World of Food

Jimmy's, the DiCarlo family's neighborhood store, started out selling oriental food to the Vietnamese and Thai who settled in the area around Bryan and Fitzhugh streets. As the neighborhood changed, the DiCarlos responded—selling Cuban food, then Jamaican, then West African. The produce counter is stocked with coconuts, green bananas, chayote, and yucca. But the DiCarlos are Dallas Italian, and recently they decided to focus on the food their own family likes to eat. They've always made sausage for themselves, and now they specialize in Italian meats and homemade sausages, sweet and hot.
